The 1991-1992 issue of Living World was a special centenary issue in which we looked back at the history of the club and the lives of the founding members. Short biographies of five of the eight founders were published with the hope that biographies of the remaining three would follow in this issue. Our hope has not been fulfilled. Missing too is the seventh installment of Matthew Cock's series on the skipper butterflies of Trinidad but this is now at hand and will appear in the next issue.

Our centenary issue contained an article by Mr. A. T. Carr on the early history of the club. This was a republication of an article in The Caribbean, a magazine published by a now-defunct organization we called the Anglo-American Caribbean Commission. M. Nardin, the French Ambassador to our country, has written us to point out that by the time of the article's publication the organization was called simply The Caribbean Commission. He has also given us a little more information on the Caracciolo family that could be included in any future article on Mr. Henry Caracciolo, the club's first president.

Six years ago we had already begun to receive articles produced on computers instead of typewriters. We must expect this trend to continue. However, we do urge authors to make life easier for the editors by leaving adequate margins and increasing the leading between the lines to approach the double spacing of the now old-fashioned typewriter. But most of all: keep the papers coming – V.C.Q.

The Trinidad and Tobago Field Naturalist ' Club The Trinidad Field Naturalists' Club was founded on the 10th July, 1891. Its name was changed to the present one in 1974. It was incorporated by an Act of Parliament (Act No.17 of 1991). The objects of the club are to bring together persons interested in the study of natural history, the diffusion of the knowledge thereof and the conservation of nature. Monthly lecture meetings are held at St. Mary's College on the second Thursday of the month while field excursions are held on the last Sunday of each month, except December, when no official club activities are organised. Membership is open to all persons of at least fifteen years of age, who subscribe to the objects of the club.
